

WILL SOON FINISH THE EXCAVATING

Gravel Taken Out in Digging Foundation Will Be Used for Concrete Work.

Next week Iyan & Plank, the contractors who have the job of excavating for the new building to be put up on North bluff and Milwaukee streets, expect to finish their work there. The depth already reached is about six and a half feet. In their digging they struck a stratum of gravel and this is being hauled to the street to be used later in making the concrete for the foundation. Six hundred yards of this gravel will be used to mix with the concrete. The excavations are being carried up as far as the sidewalk on North bluff street, though the building will not come out that far, but six feet will be allowed for the area with walkings between the building and the walls.

HOW AND WHY DE LAVAL CREAM SEPARATORS ARE SWEEPING THE FIELD

On June 1st, a creamery skimming station four miles from Milton, Wis., closed its doors. Thirty-two farmers had been having their milk skimmed there. When the station closed they were compelled to buy their own separators. Thirty-one of them bought DE LAVAL machines, notwithstanding the fact that eight different makes of separators were on the market after the business. This is only a fair sample of how the improved DE LAVAL is making a "phantom sweep" of the separator business in every dairymaking section from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The De Laval factory has been working every available man and day since early in February and is now more than 2,000 machines behind orders, so great has been the demand for the new and improved machines.

The DE LAVAL machines are simply so overwhelming in superior in every way to anything else in the shape of a cream separator that it is only natural that well informed buyers everywhere will have nothing else. They are beautiful in design, perfect in construction, and everlasting in daily use. They are made in ten new styles and ten capacities, with a size for every dairy from the smallest to the largest, and are sold at ten new prices that are just right and much the cheapest of all for the value given.

A new 1908 catalogue, constituting a separator education in itself, and any desired particulars, are to be had for the mere asking. Drop postal to TAKE A McCORMICK BINDER.

McCormick Binders are acknowledged the standard. For years and years they have given satisfaction and saved the labors of thousands of men. Take a McCormick binder part by part.

Main Frame and Main Wheel.

The square pipe tubing insures the great strength and rigidity which are so essential in binder construction. Practically the entire weight of the machine is carried on the main frame and main wheel, which are therefore the foundation of the binder, and as such require great strength. The main wheel of the McCormick binder is so constructed that any broken part can be replaced without buying a new wheel.

Counter Shaft Adjustment

In the end of the countershaft box there is a threaded end-bearing, while between the end-bearing and the end of the countershaft there are three anti-friction steel washers, which enable the owner of a McCormick binder to easily adjust the countershaft so that the gears will always be held in proper mesh.

The substantial gears and drive chain are perfect and insure perfect running in any field where a machine can operate.

See me before buying. I have the goods you want, and at right prices. Drop me a postal for illustrated catalog.

HOW THE WINNER HEARD THE NEWS

TAFT RECEIVES BULLETINS IN HIS PRIVATE OFFICE.

DOES NOT STOP HIS WORK

Wife, Family and Close Friends with Him When Result of the Convention's Vote Comes Over Wires.

Washington, June 19.—"Words do not find themselves at a time like this. I do not deny that I am very happy." This was the response of Secretary William H. Taft to a request for an expression of his views on his nomination for the presidency. The sentences did not come easily.

Throughout the afternoon, preceding the announcement of his nomination, the secretary had been laboring under suppressed nervous tension. The atmosphere of his office was electric with excitement. Notwithstanding the great personal interest which he had in the proceedings at Chicago, a thousand miles away, Secretary Taft did not permit politics to interfere for a moment with his transaction of official business as secretary of war. In the intermissions of the receipt of bulletins from the convention, the secretary disposed of several important departmental questions and when his nomination for the presidency was announced his desk practically was cleared of important official business.

Family and Friends There.
Throughout the afternoon the private office of Secretary Taft and the office of his private secretary, Frederick Carpenter, were thronged with members of his family, intimate personal and official friends and newspaper men.

Shortly before 12 o'clock Mrs. Taft arrived at the war department. She scanned carefully the bulletins which had been received from the convention and distinctly manifested her pleasure at the result of the action of the convention regarding the platform.

Shortly after four o'clock—before the nominating speeches of the presidential candidates had been concluded—Miss Helen Herron Taft, the secretary's daughter, joined the group in Mr. Taft's private office. The secretary laughingly explained that she probably would have been there sooner if she had not been too nervous to withstand the strain.

Bulletins on the Vote.
As the balloting began in the convention the atmosphere in the two rooms seemed to be surcharged with excitement. Scarcely a word was spoken. Something went wrong with the official dispatches. The first announcement was that Massachusetts had cast 22 votes for Taft. Then the announcement from Michigan was made, with its one vote for Cannon. At this moment Secretary Carpenter's telephone jangled and William Pannell, Mr. Taft's personal messenger, received a flash from the Associated Press that Taft had been nominated. The information, conveyed instantly to the secretary, created a commotion. Mr. Williams had the convention hall on the long-distance telephone; but on account of the confusion in the Coliseum was unable to confirm the news. A minute or so afterward a bulletin confirming the nomination was received and was followed soon afterward by confirmations from other quarters.

Mrs. Taft Is Happy.
Scarcely had this news been conveyed to Secretary Taft when over the official wire came the flash "Taft is nominated." Mrs. Taft rose from her seat at the secretary's desk and turned to her husband, who was standing at her right. It was an eloquent hand-clasp they gave each other. Mrs. Taft was bubbling over with happiness. All evidence of the nervous strain which had been in her face during the entire afternoon had disappeared. The secretary, himself, laughed with the joy of a boy. Around both the secretary and Mrs. Taft their friends crowded to offer their congratulations. It was a happy scene—the realization of months of labor and tribulation.

Resigns from the Cabinet.
Secretary Taft's resignation as a cabinet officer will be received by President Roosevelt some time Friday. It will take effect on July 1. This was learned Thursday night, following a conference of several hours at the White House, at which Mr. Roosevelt, Secretary Taft, Secretary Root and Assistant Secretary of State Bacon were present.

After the conference Mr. Taft was greeted by a dozen newspaper correspondents who desired to learn of his plans. "The president wants me to leave a clean slate for my successor," said the war secretary, "and it will take me at least ten days to settle all pending matters in the war department. I have no definite plans yet as to when I will leave Washington."

Sioux City, Ia., June 19.—Several persons were injured, one perhaps fatally, two houses and a half dozen barns were destroyed by a tornado which struck the eastern outskirts of Sioux City Thursday.

Urgentness.
But, after all, what shall it profit a man to try to be great if he has never been taken in hand by the Gridiron club?

WHITE REVIEWS CONVENTION IN SKILLED MANNER

convention La Follette's name had made the hit of the afternoon. But he did not pass the crowd's limit, and the smile which captivated everyone, wore off and he grew angry, and "the subsequent proceedings interested him no more."

It was Mr. McCoo—remember the name—who according to the nomination of La Follette and started the whoop heard round the world.

There seems to be no question that of all the candidates beside Taft, La Follette got the best demonstration.

But after that demonstration occurred. Some one walked across the gallery back of the speakers' platform with a flag containing Roosevelt's picture, and the applause for La Follette merged into the futile attempt to stampede the crowd to Roosevelt, and for a quarter of an hour the yelling continued.

It was quieted as the roll call on the president began and continued down to Iowa. There a silence fell, and continued until Taft was nominated.

Now written down here in a thousand words, this seems like the story of a stirring episode. Yet it covers events that lasted from ten o'clock until half-past five, of which the story is something like two and six-eighths seconds for each of the allies and this is the best part of it all; those who had sought the nomination the hardest.

Cannon and Knox and Fairbanks got no more than Foraker, who took what he could pick up.

There were no differences between the seventy-five-dollar picture fireworks and the ten-cent roman candle—they all fizzled and went out in gloom.

And the meaning of it all is this: that the republican party has taken a step forward—but not a stride.

A party is entirely like a fleet. It can go only as fast as its slowest vessel, and in this parade of the republican fleet, the rapid Wisconsin—a trim and seaworthy boat, has to slow up for Vermont and New York.

The general average of speed of the republican fleet is found in the Mississippi valley states.

They nominated Taft. They made the platform.

It will be regarded as a long step in New England, but it will be regarded as a crow-jump in Nebraska.

And speaking as a republican, one is forced to admit that if any of the fast boats or any of the slow boats takes a notion that she can go it alone, the democratic enemy will catch her out alone, and capture her.

The fleet now has an admiral and a rear admiral. Today it will get a vice admiral and then will sail out for "a fight or a frolic."

Taft for President

If anything was needed to confirm the statement made ten days ago that "all was over but the shouting," it came yesterday when the great convention hall echoed with applause, which refused to be silenced until a vote was taken, and Secretary of War William Howard Taft, declared the nominee of the convention.

Nominating speeches, which had been in type for a week, for Fairbanks, Knox, Cannon and other favorites, were listened to as a matter of courtesy, but they represented naught but wasted energy, and bottled up eloquence.

Taft, Taft, nothing but Taft, was the slogan which captured the convention, and the party is satisfied, for the expected has happened. Taft is nominated and he will be the next president. He will also be the greatest president since Lincoln, because he combines with the gentleness of McKinley and the courage of Roosevelt, the conservatism and strong personality which inspires respect and confidence.

While the nation is in the enjoyment of peace, both at home and abroad, it is disturbed, in many ways, as never before.

The "square deal" and "big stick" have captivated the masses, but they have also revolutionized the country, and the wrongdoer incident to radical reform measures is apparent on every hand. The pace has been so swift that adjustment to meet changed conditions was impossible, and if the country ever needed a level head and steady hand at the helm, it needs such a combination today.

Under Taft's administration there will be no backward step, but the tangled threads will be straightened out, and out of chaos and confusion will come order and sanity.

Briefly stated, William H. Taft was born at Cincinnati, September 15, 1857, graduated at Yale in 1878, married at Cincinnati June, 1880, to Helen Herron, in public life ever since.

The history of his achievements is an open book. His work in Cuba as a purchaser, in the Philippines as an organizer, and in the war department as a great general, is characteristic of the man, tireless, patient, kind but firm, he represents the highest type of statesmanship and American manhood. He will honor the nation which has honored him, and regret will never be expressed because of the action of the republican national convention in 1904.

NOLAN FOR CONGRESS

The candidacy of Attorney Thomas S. Nolan for congress, to succeed the Hon. H. A. Cooper, in the First Congressional district, is progressing, and Mr. Nolan is much encouraged with the outlook.

The republicans of the district feel that the time has come when they should be represented by a man who is in sympathy with the party, and whose loyalty is never questioned. They have confidence in Mr. Nolan and will cheerfully give him their support. The Heloit Free Press recently gave him the following endorsement: "Att. Thomas S. Nolan of Janesville authorizes the announcement of his candidacy for congressman before the republican voters of the First Wisconsin district at the primaries to be held Sept. 1. Mr. Nolan made an eleven-hour effort to secure the nomination two years ago and the result was so gratifying that he enters the field this year with every hope of success. "This banner republican district is entitled to a representative in congress who will stand with President Roosevelt or his successor, whenever he may be, and personify the republican strength and spirit of southern Wisconsin. This part of the state would have appreciated a man of the type of Mr. Nolan during the last hours of the session just closed, when the country, party and president were calling for currency legislation. First district republicans want a man who can be depended upon to stand with his party when such a crisis is met. Such a man is T. S. Nolan. Such a congressman will be made if he proves to be the choice of the majority of the republicans of the district. He is an able lawyer, a brilliant speaker, a genial gentleman and faithful to every trust—a republican whose loyalty has never been questioned.

"Mr. Nolan, being the only Rock county candidate, believes that he will receive the support of the home voters almost to a man and reports coming in and opinions heard here indicate that this is probably true. He intends to take the time to make a thorough canvass of the district and as he is known as a whirlwind campaigner, the race against Mr. Cooper of Racine will be a warm one."

NOMINATION OF LA FOLLETTE
Ex-Footballer H. F. Cochems, the sponsor for Senator La Follette, touched the audience on a different spot. He takes himself and Mr. La Follette exceedingly seriously. He started in well and had he stopped before his speech became a bore he would have accomplished all that he started to do.

But he was determined to tell everything that La Follette ever had done or ever expected to do, and the effect of it upon generations as yet unborn. It would have done well enough at a meeting of ward workers, most of whom hold city jobs, but the spectators didn't come there to hear a political speech, no matter how true it was or how good it was, and they began to demonstrate their displeasure as they had done with Gov. Harty, but less maliciously, for the reason that young Mr. Cochems didn't lose his temper and was so boyish appearing and was working so hard and had to wipe the perspiration from his face so often. Mr. Cochems said that something or other was high treason. "Name your man," some of the crowd shouted impatiently.

Others who evidently had misheard, stood took up the cry, but what they shouted was: "Hang your man."

"Gentlemen," pleaded the young man, "I know you are tired. I am tired myself. This isn't fun for me. It's a duty. Now, can't you give me a chance to talk, inasmuch as that is all that Wisconsin will get out of this convention?"

The audience laughed good naturedly and heard him in patience for five minutes longer, but when he began to tell what Mr. La Follette had done in 1904 they began to shout him down again.

"Take another drink," they advised, referring to the water which stood on a table behind him.

Mr. Cochems did so and started afresh. This is the story of what happened to Wisconsin in the convention hall yesterday. Congressman Cooper assisted in the demonstration, as he was the one man who voted against the majority report in the committee on resolutions, and insisted in occupying the time of the convention in a minority report which was voted down by a majority of over 900.

"Representative government" received a hard jolt in the national convention, and its promoters soon discovered that Wisconsin is only a small part of the union.

Most men would have retired gracefully from a contest of 45 to 1, and yielded to the will of the overwhelming majority, but Cooper, like Cochems, was performing a sacred duty. The performance was destitute of fun or ambition, but the man directing it had given orders, and his will was supreme.

When 28 years and 350 weeks pronounced the final verdict on Wisconsin reform amendments, Congressman Cooper must have realized that pulling chestnuts out of the fire is a thankless occupation. Plenty of rope and willingness to use it, is all that is necessary to political suicide.

The band wagon is well loaded today and everybody shouts for Taft.

COTTON LEAK CASES WERE HEARD TODAY

Alleged Conspiracy Cases Were up for Preliminary Hearing in New York Today.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
New York, June 19.—The alleged conspiracy cases growing out of the cotton leak scandals of 1905 came up for a preliminary hearing in the federal court today. The principal defendant is Theodore H. Price, at one time known as the cotton king, because of his tremendous trades in the staple and the skill which he executed his operations in the cotton market. The other defendants are Moses Hays and Frederick A. Peckham of this city, and Edwin S. Holmes, Jr., former assistant statistician of the department of Agriculture at Washington.

The trial of these cases is awaited with much interest. It was more than three years ago that reports were first circulated regarding the alleged cotton leak. It was charged by Hiltard Cheatham, secretary of the Southern Cotton Association, that information obtained from the department of Agriculture, furnished by some officer or officers within it, was used to influence the cotton market. Secretary Wilson immediately began an investigation. As a result statistician Edwin H. Holmes was suspended from duty and charged, alleging conspiracy were brought against Moses Hays and Frederick A. Peckham. Hays and Peckham were acquitted at once, and Holmes later was put on trial. After a trial lasting nineteen days the jury disagreed and was discharged.

No further action in the case transpired until about two weeks ago when the federal grand jury after a long investigation returned indictments against the four men named. The grand jury found two indictments against Price, one charging to commit an offense against the United States and the other bribery of a government official.

What is it?

Pasteurization means heating to such a temperature, about 160 degrees F., that most of the germs, including disease germs, are destroyed. DELIBERATE EFFORT TO BREAK WINDOWS?

Second Mysterious Happening at Helmsstreet's Drugstore Last Night Points to This Conclusion.

About four o'clock yesterday afternoon a small missile, now believed to have been a lead bullet, struck the small pane of glass on the north side of the south entrance to Helmsstreet's drugstore on South Main street and penetrated far enough to throw small splinters of glass among the goldfish. A lady who was sitting near the entrance and who was startled by the sound, arose quickly and gazed out into the street. No vehicle was passing and no person was in sight in the immediate vicinity of the store. The inquiry immediately made at the drugstore, however, was that the missile had come from the northwest corner of the courthouse park.

This incident has reopened the whole question of the origin of a series of supposed accidents which have occurred to plate glass windows in the business section during the past few weeks. Several weeks ago the large bow front in Woolworth & Co.'s store on Milwaukee street was penetrated by some object, supposed at that time to have been a fragment of stone broken by a passing vehicle and hurled with incredible swiftness in that direction. The theory was accepted, despite the fact that certain parties who were standing near the store at the time, informed the police that no car of any kind was passing just then and that they were in position to see any suspicious movement in any quarter, whatsoever, excepting the alley adjoining T. P. Burns' store. A similar thing happened to a window in the Simpson store not long thereafter and on Wednesday night, at the moment when the collision of a horse and buggy and Street Car No. 7 occurred, a small projectile, at that time supposed to be a stone, crashed through the large plate glass window in the Helmsstreet store.

In the latter case, it seemed incredible at the time that such injury could have been wrought by small boys throwing stones. The police are now working on the theory that either a slingshot or sling was used and that the objects thrown were small lead bullets in all these instances. A lady residing in the third ward has been paying the boys a half cent apiece for sparrows, the latter being regarded as delicate messengers by her pet cat. But the window-breaking incident has been repeated too often to be regarded as accidental and it is believed that someone is deliberately and maliciously engaged in destroying and mutilating the ornaments within the city limits and youngsters owing these weapons will be subjected to a searching inquiry.

FOR BETTERMENT OF BELOIT DORMITORY

C. Russell Zeininger of This City, President of Chautauk Hall Association, and Others Active.

C. Russell Zeininger of this city, newly elected president of the Chautauk Hall association of Beloit college, and others are engaged in an effort to make the noted dormitory more attractive and eliminate some of the unpleasant features connected with the present mode of living there. A committee from the board of trustees, Dean George L. Collier, and Mr. Zeininger held a conference yesterday with regard to tentative plans. Though the dining room has been put at a loss for some time past, the trustees have voted to keep it in operation next year and by making it obligatory on all roomers to take their meals there, and securing more ideal conditions. It is thought that the number of boarders can be materially increased.

WHEN THE OLD LADY WILTED.

Florat's Simple Explanation as to His "Remarkable" Plant.

With a firm tread and a masterful air a lady strode into the shop of a London florist. Her choice fell on a remarkably green palm in an ornamental pot.

"Will it flourish in the sunshine?" she inquired of the shop assistant, with a sharp glance from her eagle eye.

"Yes, madam," was the courteous response.

"Don't say it will if it won't," snapped she, amiably. "If it does well in the sun, will the shade hurt it?"

"Oh, no, madam!"

"What!" she exclaimed, with a triumphant, now-I've-caught-you air.

"You tell me it will thrive equally well in sun or shade? Young man, you don't know your business! Fetch your employer!"

The owner of the establishment was instantly summoned. Even he quailed before her, but for all that he backed up his employer's statement.

"Then it's a really remarkable and accommodating plant!" she commented, waxing sarcastic. "My good man, it's both ridiculous and unnatural!"

"That's just it," interrupted the florist expert. "It's an artificial plant."

ILL HEALTH AND MORBIDNESS.

Unfortunate Result of Intense Passion for Sympathy.

One of the tendencies of ill health is to make one morbid. People who are constantly thinking about their ailments, worrying about their troubles, suffering pain, often develop a morbid passion for sympathy. They want to tell everybody of their aches and pains, to describe their symptoms, says a writer. Have you ever known a woman who has acquired the doctor habit, a woman who loves nothing in the world quite so well as an opportunity to tell the doctor of her ailments? She has poured them out to unwilling ears, to forced listeners, till she longs for some one who can really appreciate it all, who sympathizes with her in her troubles; so she sends for the doctor or goes to see him. This becomes almost a mania with some women, who have few outside activities to divert them. Their minds naturally revert to themselves and they think of their unfortunate condition until they become saturated with the poisoned thought.

Human Pincushions.

"I was in an uptown tearoom where the scenery is all out of proportion to the amount served you," said a New York clubman. "I was dallying with some ice cream when my spoon struck a common, everyday pin in the bottom of the frozen stuff. I gave a little wave and a waiter slipped to my side. Love Atonement for All.
It has been said that a man may starve his wife, may even beat her, yet keep her love if between blows he assures her of his love and holds the bruises with kisses. Certain it is that the woman who loves a man can always win him over and condone any offense of which he may be guilty so long as she believes in his love for herself.—Exchange.

Just Wait.
Every age the poor are better off, says a hopeful and optimistic preacher. Yes, all they have to do is to wait a few ages.

When cool, it will jellify and may be served with whipped cream or any good pudding sauce. The JELL-O costs 10c. per package and can be obtained at any good grocer's.

Miss Della Masterson met with a very painful accident Monday in a peculiar manner. A tin pail with a light-bulb cover was on the stove containing boiling water. Miss Masterson used a tinfoil to pry off the cover and an explosion followed which was heard by her brothers at the barn. The hot water and steam struck her full in the face, causing intense pain and suffering. The shock will confine her to her bed for some time. She is cared for by her sister, Mrs. Dougherty of Janesville.

The Unpopular Feminine Fool.
There is nobody so unpopular in feminine society as a fool. Everybody is down on her, even her fellow fools being sorry for her, and when one woman is sorry for another it can only mean one thing—that is, that there is nothing to be feared from her.—The Ladies' Field.

Don't Try Uncertain Recipes
It is entirely unnecessary to experiment with this, that and the other recipe. Why waste time, money, and patience when you can get from your grocer, for instance, a package of "DIPLO" Preparation—Lemon, Chocolate or "Custard" for making pies that are so good that when you eat one you will want another? The way to please the men-folk is to give them good food.

A Better Soap Was Needed

And so, three years ago, we began to make P. & G. Naphtha Soap.

Four years ago, we recognized the need for a better naphtha soap than any then made.

Three years ago, we began to manufacture P. & G. Naphtha Soap.

Today, we offer it with the assurance that it is better than anything of its kind on the market.

How much better?

Nearly 50% better.

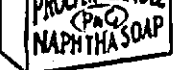

Why?

Because, in the first place, it is white—there is no rosin in it.

Because it is harder than any other naphtha soap; and, therefore, will last longer.

Because it weighs more; and, therefore, will do more work.

P. & G. Naphtha Soap is for sale in almost every grocery in this city.

The Price is 5 Cents a Cake.

by ANTHONY HOPE

Author of "The Prisoner of Zenda"

Going was very heavy; so was the rain; so was the darkness. The and his horse made a blurred, indistinct shape on the murky face of night. But his orders were to hasten, and he pushed on at a sharp trot and soon covered his first stage, the five miles in the old wooden bridge, where the road leaves the course of the Kruth, is carried over the river and strikes northwest toward the hills.

At this point he received the first intimation that his journey was not to be so solitary as he had supposed. When he was halfway across the bridge he heard what sounded like an echo of the beat of his horse's hoofs on the timbers behind him. The thing seemed odd. He halted a moment to listen. The sound of his horse's hoofs stopped, but the echo went on. It was no echo, then. He was not the only traveler that way. He picked his horse with the spur. Regaining the road, he heard the timbers of the bridge still sounding. He touched his horse again and went forward briskly. He had no reason to suspect his fellow traveler's errand with his own, but he was sure that when General Stenovic's ordered dispatch he would not be pleased to learn that his messenger had been passed by another wayfarer on the road.

But the stranger, too, was in a hurry. It seemed, Markart could not shake him off. On the contrary, he drew nearer. The road was still broad and good. Markart tried a center. The stranger broke into a canter. "At any rate, it makes for good time," thought Markart, smiling inwardly. In fact, the two found themselves drawn into a sort of race. On they went, covering the miles at a quick, sustained trot, exhilarating to the men, but rather a strain on their horses. Both were well mounted. Markart, a young man, was the stranger, a man of middle age, with a good horse, was, he turned his head, but could see only the same sort of blur as he himself made. Part of the blur, however, seemed of a lighter color than his. Markart's horse pecked. The rider spoke to the fact that he was pounding his mount without doing much good to himself. He would see whether the unknown meant to pass him or was content to keep on equal terms. His pace fell to a gentle trot—so did the stranger's. Markart walked his horse for half a mile—so did the stranger. Then, forward they went easily, each keeping his position till Markart came to where the road forked—on the right to Lohrva, on the left to Praskok and Vohent. Markart drew rein and waited. He might just as well see where the stranger was going.

The stranger came up, and Markart started violently. The lighter tinge of the blur was explained. The stranger rode a white horse. It dashed on Markart that the prince rode a white charger and that the animal had been in Lohrva the day before. He had seen it being exercised. He peered into the darkness, trying to see the man's face. The effort was of no avail. The stranger came to a stand beside him. Then the stranger turned his horse's head to the left. He was for Praskok or Vohent, then? Markart followed his example. He knew why he did not speak to the stranger, but he was wondering why on earth the stranger did not speak to him. He went on wondering till it occurred to him that perhaps the stranger was in exactly the same state of mind.

There was no question of entering or even of trotting now. The road rose steeply. It was loose and foundered from heavy rain. Great stones lay about, dangerous traps for a careless rider. The horses labored. At the same moment, with the same instinct, Markart and the stranger dismounted. The next three miles were done on foot, and there before them in deeper black rose the gate tower of the castle of Praskok. The stranger had fallen a little behind again. Now he drew level. They were almost opposite the castle.

A dog barked from the stables. Another answered from the castle. Two more took up the time from the stables. The castle guardian redoubled his responsive efforts. A man came running out from the stables with a lantern. A light flashed in the doorway of the castle. Both Markart and the stranger came to a standstill. The man with the lantern raised it in the air to see the faces of the travelers.

They saw each other's faces too. The first result was to send them into a fit of laughter—a relief from tension, a recognition of the absurdity into which their diplomatic caution had led them.

"By the powers, Captain Markart!" "M. Zerkovitch, by heaven!" They laughed again.

"Ah, and we might have had a pleasant ride together!" "I should have rejoiced in the solace of your conversation!"

But neither asked the other why he had behaved in such a ridiculous manner.

"And our destination is the same?" asked Zerkovitch. "You stop here at the castle?"

"Yes, yes, M. Zerkovitch! And you?"

"Yes, captain, yes. My journey ends at the castle."

The men led away their horses, which were needed tending, and they mounted the wooden casemate side by side, both feeling foolish, yet sure they had done right. In the doorway stood Peter Vassip with his lantern.

"Your business, gentlemen?" he said. It was between 2 and 3 in the morning.

They looked at each other. Zerkovitch was quicker, and, with a courteous gesture, invited his companion to take precedence.

"Private and urgent, with his royal highness."

"So is mine, Peter," said Zerkovitch. Markart's humor was touched again. He began to laugh. Zerkovitch laughed, too, but there was a touch of excitement and nervousness in his mirth.

"His royal highness went to bed an hour ago," said Peter Vassip.

"I'm afraid you must rouse him. My business is immediate," said Markart. "And I suppose yours is, too, M. Zerkovitch?" he added jokingly.

"That it is," said Zerkovitch. "I'll rouse the prince. Will you follow me, gentlemen?"

Peter closed and barred the gate, and they followed him through the courtyard. A couple of sentries were peeping it.

For the rest all was still. Peter led them into a small room where a fire was burning and left them together. Side by side they stood close to the fire, drying their coats and trying to dry their boots and breeches at the comforting blaze.

"We must keep this story a secret or we shall be laughed at by all Slavina, M. Zerkovitch."

Zerkovitch gave him a sharp glance. "I should think you would regard your discreet conduct to your superiors, captain. Orders are orders, secrecy is secrecy, even though it turns out that there was no need for it."

Markart was about to reply with a joke when the prince entered. He greeted both cordially, showing, of course, in Markart's presence no surprise at Zerkovitch's arrival.

"There will be rooms and food and wine ready for you, gentlemen, in a few minutes. Captain Markart, you must rest here for tonight, for your horse's sake as well as your own. I suppose your business will wait till the morning?"

"My orders were to lose no moment in communicating it to you, sir."

"Very well. You're from his majesty?"

"Yes, sir."

"The king comes first—and I dare say your affair will wait, Zerkovitch?"

Zerkovitch protested with an eagerness by no means altered in the presence of a third party, an aide-camp to Stenovic. "No, sir; no, it can't wait!"

The prince interrupted. "Nonsense, man, nonsense! Now go to your room. I'll come in and bid you 'Good night.'"

He pushed his overzealous friend from the room, calling to Peter Vassip to guide him to the apartment he was to occupy. Then he came back to Markart.

"Now, captain?"

Markart took out his letter and presented it, with a salute. "Sit down while I read it," said the prince, seating himself at the table.

The prince read his letter and sat playing with it in his fingers for half a minute or so. Then a thought seemed to strike him. "Heaven's, I never told Peter to light fire! I hope he has. You're wet, and Zerkovitch is terribly liable to take cold." He jumped up.

"Excuse me. We have no bells in this old place, you know." He ran out of the room, closing the door behind him.

Markart sprang to the door. He did not dare to open it, but he listened to the prince's footsteps. They sounded to the left—once, two, three, four, five, six paces. They stopped. A door opened and shut. Markart made a mental note and went back to the fire, smiling. He thought that idea of his really would please General Stenovic.

In three minutes the prince returned. "I did Peter injustice. Zerkovitch's fire is all right," he said, "and there's a good one in your room, too, he tells me. And now, Captain Markart, to our business. You know the contents of the letter you carried?"

"Yes, sir. They were communicated to me."

"The pessimistic Bachelor," writes the correspondent of a Chicago newspaper, "who enters matrimony on the $12-a-week basis is running a big risk." Confirmed bachelors will probably move to amend by striking out the words "on the $12-a-week basis."
